Featured Annual Event, Hosted by Big D & Bubba
Barlines, Omni/Nashville

Big D

Started in radio when Big D was 14 years old at a 1000-watt Christian radio station in Cookeville, Tenn. By the age of 17, hosted his first talk show, which led to his morning gig on an oldies station in the same city.

First country radio experience was he was 19 in Billings, Montana, where he fell in love with the country lifestyle.

Met his wife Kathy in Billings. Big D and Kathy have two sons, Zak and Gunner.

Something that you may be surprised to learn; In high school he was an Exchange Student, and spent time in Russia...before the wall fell....when it was still Communist! Talk about crazy! Seeing that, and the way that the poor people of Russia lived and suffered under that regime really helps solidify his love for the Good 'OI USA.

A private airplane pilot, and a big aviation buff, you can usually find him tinkering around the hangar messing with the plane when he's not on the radio.

Bubba

At 14 years old, Bubba became a disc jockey at the local radio station in his hometown of Houma, LA.

Ever the nomad at heart, he went on to use radio to travel the world and worked at stations in places such as Guam and Tokyo. While working in those cities, I was able to travel extensively to countries & cities in Asia, Australia, and the South Pacific. Eventually homesick, he returned to the U.S. Trust Bubba, it happens to anyone who lives overseas for too long. You NEED America! Lol...

Other markets on his radio resume' include: Saginaw, Detroit, Michigan, Nashville, and El Paso, Texas. Other radio stints in various formats from Talk and Hip-Hop, to Rock & Classic Rock, in markets such as Reno, Nevada, Miami, Florida, New Orleans and Baton Rouge.

Bubba lives in Nashville with his three children (Olivia, Ava, and Frank).

A huge Frank Sinatra fan and a self professed "car-nerd" who uses free time to get behind the wheel. And, just like Big D...I too am also a private airplane pilot.

WWWF: The Long (Island) & Short Of It

Formally labeled as "Nassau-Suffolk" by Nielsen after the two counties comprising it, Long Island is the nation's 21st largest radio market and stretches from the New York City limits to the island's eastern tip. Nassau-Suffolk is also an embedded market, which means it is simultaneously part of the New York City market, by which it is often overshadowed.

David Bevins

On March 20, Connoisseur switched its Classic Rock station on Long Island, WBZO, to Country as "The Wolf," with new WWWF calls. In its first month, The Wolf scored a 2.9 share (up from WBZO's 2.3). In its second month, The Wolf rose to a 3.1, good for ninth overall and the largest share for any Country station in the Long Island ratings since 1993, when then-Country WYNY/New York pulled a 3.1. Country Aircheck caught up with COO/GM David Bevins for a deeper look at the Wolf, which coincidentally joins the Country Aircheck/Mediabase reporting panel with this week's chart.

CA: What else should we know about the market?

DB: Long Island is not New York City. The island has three million people [and] the median age is around 50. Everybody here knows they're living in the shadows of New York, but they take a lot of pride in knowing this is their own market.

Why the flip?

One of the biggest reasons was perceived need. The Jones Beach Amphitheater seats 15,000, and there were packed country shows there throughout last summer. I'd see people line dancing in the parking lot and think, "How is there not a Country station serving this population?" Nash [WNSH-FM/New York] exited the marketplace a while ago and it left a void.

Fortunately, we have five stations here. Two were Rock – mainstream, 94.3 The Shark [WWSK] – and 103.1 Max FM [WBZO], with kind of a "Jack" format with no personalities and a lot of music. WBZO did relatively well but was not meeting our expectations. And we were up against a big Rock station, WBAB. Rather than fighting that battle any longer, we wanted to create a station with a unique format no one else is doing in the marketplace.

WWWF: The Long (Island) & Short Of It

We still have The Shark reaching the male audience, but now we have a completely new format that is serving a whole new audience.

You mention the 2021 demise of WNSH, and the market also is home to WJVC. Did those factors give you any pause in going Country?

WJVC is a great radio station. Long Island spans 130 miles in length, and WJVC's signal reaches the far east end of the island, which is a less populated area. In contrast, WWWF's tower is centrally positioned, offering a more powerful signal that reaches a larger available audience.

Reflecting on the Nash experience, we initially had our reservations. However, we recognize the distinct demographics of Long Island. I don't believe Nash did very well in the city of New York, but it did well in Nassau County. Before we launch a format, we'd typically do a market analysis and our researcher would recommend where there was opportunity. This time, our team, including VP/Programming Keith Dakin, PD Patrick Shea and Consultant Joel Raab, went with our gut based on what we were seeing and experiencing and how big Country radio is right now.

You've gotten out of the gate fast, how have you been getting the word out?

We're doing a heavy dose of digital marketing on Long Island with social media, connected TV and pre-roll video. We know the ZIP codes we want to go after. During our first week on the air, we gave away tickets to Zach Bryan every 15 minutes. We created a heat map with where the winners were from, and we were very pleased to see winners coming from all over the island.

What about traditional marketing?

We are extremely active with our street team. We have a big orange van, an 18-foot inflatable wolf, a lot of giveaway prizes and we're getting involved in as much country stuff as possible. Whether it's paid or not paid, we want to be involved with country events happening on Long Island.

You're still filling out the airstaff and have a local talent (Alexa Neo) in middays, what about the decision to put Big D & Bubba in mornings?

We're of the belief the best talent wins no matter if its local or syndicated. Big D & Bubba are some of the best talent in morning Country radio,

WWWF G/R/C PERCENTAGE

and we have a nice relationship with Compass Media. They are very easy to work with and, early on, it's going well. [Ed. Note: In May, WWWF ranked 12th in Persons 6+, 17th 25-54 and 2nd 18-34 in morning drive.]

What have you been seeing under the hood in your first two monthlies?

The early ratings have been phenomenal. We are doing very well with the 18-34 audience, and I think what's happening is the Top 40 audience also enjoys brand new country music. We also did well with men. The men who were listening to Max had a choice to leave or stay, and hopefully some of them stayed.

What were the initial expectations for The Wolf?

We were just hoping to do a little better than what we were doing with Max. We couldn't be happier with what's happened in two months and how that helps our cluster. The month of May has been the best month for our cluster in four years.

What's next?

In the immediate future, Jason Aldean is coming to Jones Beach and Jelly Roll is coming to Madison Square Garden. We're hoping to be involved in events in New York City and give each one of them as much promotion as possible – we want country to thrive on Long Island. Even without us, Country was succeeding, and shows were selling out. We want to be a part of that as much as we can. Reach Bevins here.
